AMATEUR SHOW AT TINLEY PARK MARCH 16th

Auditions for the Amateur show to be presented at the Tinley Park school gym on the evening of March 16 under the sponsorship of the Tinley Park Recreation Commission has given assurance of an exceptionally fine and interesting program.

Twenty-one acts have been accepted by the committee and these range from an 8 year old dancer to a dancer 70 years of age doing a routine which would make many a younger person gasp for breath.

In between these are vocalists doing the most recent popular songs to the classical type of songs. Along with all this there will be presented a great variety of musical instruments from the simplest xylophone to an eight piece band. Topping off the program is an act of magic which will keep the customers laughing and wondering as well as dreaming of things coming out of nowhere and other things vanishing into thin air.

All of this is combined by a genial Master of Ceremonies to keep the show rolling with never a dull moment.

An acrobatic dance will have the audience wondering how any human can move so easily, in such difficult positions. Music by a band will have everyone tapping their toes in time with the music, while the acrobats will make pleasing music for all. An Adagio dance will bring gasps from all hoping no one misses the cue and thus end in a heap on the floor.

Soft music! A sweet voice as an amateur brings quiet to the house with a song to stir all remembrances.

A dance by a 70 year old Amateur will bring words of amazement from the younger people as he goes thru a routine making the taps speak for themselves in such rapid succession they can hardly be distinguished from one another.

Where is the cigarette? It was here just a minute ago. Careful mister it will burn the place to the ground. Our magician doesn't seem to think so. He's going right on with the show still we're a little worried about it.

Isn't she cute? Yes she sings well and the dance she does. It is a wonder what these small children can do with their toes and legs these days. This 8 year old dancer really does move across the stage at quite a pace.

Here are two singers looking scared to death. Let's help them thru the number. Not bad, good voices lots of courage and having fun too.

Where did that milk cow come from? He just emptied that far now there is more there. Something is screwy. Yes, that is the magician having fun with all of us with his trick. Still I'd like to know how he does it. Watch this one now—

Music, fun, enjoyment is the key

Excellent Program Features Frankfort Lions Charter Night

In spite of blustery March weather, ice and snowy roads over 130 guests attended the annual banquet of the Frankfort Lions club held in the parlors of St. Peter's church in Frankfort Tuesday evening.

The banquet opened with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and pledge of Allegiance to the Flag and the Prayer by Rev. L. E. Winters, pastor of the Frankfort Methodist church. At the conclusion of the banquet a highly interesting program was presented.

Lion President, Wm. Semmler, extended a cordial welcome to the guests and members of neighboring Lions clubs and introduced Rev. E. Bizer, program chairman of the Lions Club as Master of Ceremonies.

In his spritely pleasing manner, Rev. Bizer started the program with a number of clever whitticisms following which Frankfort's popular entertainer and musical director Art Lambrecht put on a couple of novelty songs as well as old time hits.

He was accompanied by Miss Lillian Collins at the piano. A very clever take off on the popular song the Easter Parade caused a great deal of merriment when the men guests staged a parade with a ladies hat.

Herman Troppe of Joliet put added zip to the program with his outstanding accordion selections. Miss Lillian Collins also favored with a piano selection.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. Clarence Showalter of the Presbyterian church of Chicago Heights.

His talk was on "Energizing Faith" in which he pointed out that one of the worst faults of the world at the present time and even private individuals is fear. He emphasized the need of having absolute faith in one's self.

The banquet closed with the singing of America. A very sumptuous meal was served by the Ladies Aid of St. Peter's church.

Frankfort Resident Has Narrow Escape In Burning Home

Mrs. Anna Pfaff, of Frankfort, mother of Walter Pfaff, Village clerk, escaped from her burning home Friday night at 11:30 o'clock after being awakened by the smell of smoke and the crackling of flames.

Alone in her upstairs room where she was sleeping, she hurried down to find the rooms filled with smoke. Mrs. Pfaff, clad only in her night clothes, ran next door to the home of her sister, Mrs. Geo. Haass where her daughter Miss Sylvia Pfaff was spending the evening. They summoned the Frankfort Fire Department who responded immediately but were hampered by the smoke.

After extinguishing flames in the dining room it was some time before fire broke out in the living room.

Efforts of the firemen confined the damage to the first floor which was entirely gutted. Firemen remained on the scene until 2:30 a.m.

The Pfaff's were grieved over the loss of their pet dog and canary whose rescue was attempted unsuccessfully. Fire chief Fred Kohlhaugen said the fire was apparently caused by defective wiring and estimated the damage to amount to about $5,000. The house was insured.

Jack Gougar of New Lenox Awarded Many Citations

For "Constantly outstanding performance and distinguished achievement", Jack Mason Gougar, ARM1-c trainee in the EE&RM school at College Station, Texas and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Gougar Sr. of New Lenox has been awarded the Presidential Unit Citation. The award was presented in a special ceremony held recently with the entire personnel of the Naval training school assembled for the presentation which was made by Lt. Commander Jean A. Lambert, Commanding Officer.

Gougar's service aboard the carrier ENTERPRISE earned him this Citation; for his participation as a member of a tornado bombing squadron in many actions, including raids on the Gilbert, Marshall, Wake, Santa Cruz, and Marcus Island and the Battles of Midway, Guadalcanal, Solomons, Santa Cruz, and Stewart Islands. During this period the Enterprise was officially credited with sinking 35 Japanese vessels and destroying 185 aircraft.

For bravery in action during the battle of Santa Cruz he was awarded the Navy Air Medal and another Citation and served on the carriers HORNET and YORKTOWN as well as the ENTERPRISE. He was on the Yorktown when she went down and spent two hours in the water before being rescued. While attached to the Hornet, his squadron returned from a mission to find that their ship had been sunk and they were forced to land on another ship in the group.

He held down the job of radio man and turret gunner, an important and particularly dangerous position in the torpedo air squadron. It was of interest to note that regardless of the carrier to which he was assigned he always had the same pilot.

Jack saw his first action shortly after Pearl Harbor and remained in the Pacific theatre except for short periods necessary for retraining, until transfer to College Station in Texas.

To meet, or see Jack, one would never suspect the extent of his experiences. At the college he is termed a modest, handsome chap, a good student and a hard worker. He performs his duties with a vigor that really demands admiration, leaving the campus only to visit his wife, to whom he is very devoted. Mrs. Gougar is living near the station.

New Lenox is proud of a real war hero in the person of Jack Mason Gougar ARM1-c who has been serving as company commander of Company 31, and now that he has finished his Radio work at the college Station, he is patiently awaiting orders to start his Pilot training.

While playing in his home in Mokena last Friday morning little Geo. Phelps Jr., aged 2 1-2 years, son of Capt. and Mrs. Geo. Phelps suddenly became very ill and on going to his mother, fell unconscious.

It was discovered the little boy had been overcome with coal gas from the furnace in their home. A short time in the open air soon revived him.

New pipes leading from the furnace to the chimney were installed at once. The little lad is none the worse for the experience.

World's First Aluminum Box Cars Delivered to Rock Island Lines

The Rock Island Lines hasn't really started using Army jeeps to pull freight cars, but with the new-weight aluminum alloy used in the construction of the car pictured above, it really can be done.

Designed by the Reynolds Metals Company and built by the Mount Vernon (Illinois) Car Co., the first of ten new aluminum cars was recently delivered to the Rock Island in Chicago, where it was viewed by thousands of railroaders and the public generally. (Including, of course, K. T. Stevens, beauteous star of stage and screen who took a ride in the jeep.)

The special high tensile aluminum alloy of these cars was first developed by the Reynolds Company for B-29 Bombers, and because of the lightness and low center of gravity of the cars, they can be used to advantage on high speed passenger as well as freight trains. They have the same capacity as the ordinary box-car.

The new equipment which transportation experts predict will contribute greatly to rail progress, was the result of months of technical study and experiment, and while material shortages will limit production for the present, the Reynolds Company is looking forward to extensive post-war markets on railroads.

Five of the cars which the Rock Island will acquire are equipped with high speed passenger trucks and roller bearings, and will be placed in service as soon as they are received, officials of the road said.

Marines Use Land Based Rockets

Members of a marine rocket platoon tote their equipment over rough Bougainville terrain to the front lines. During this campaign, the first in which land based rockets were used, both rockets and portable launchers were transported in much the same manner that machine guns are moved into position during landings. A feature of these rockets is that they do not require a solid base from which to be fired.

PLANS FOR PACIFIC WAR

It has all been kept very hush-hush, but top army officials have made a vitally important decision on war production after Germany's defeat.

Original war production schedules called for a 40 per cent cutback after Germany caves in, permitting a vast reconversion program and the early production of automobiles, refrigerators, radios and other goods.

However, the army plus WPBigs have now decided to keep the war machine rolling full tilt, not cutting back any but a few items until Japan is defeated.

Behind the vital decision is an important new plan to speed victory in the Pacific. Confidential war department surveys disclosed that it would take over a year to return European veterans, together with their equipment, much of it geared for winter rather than tropical fighting. Allied shipping shortages would make it a long job to crate, sort, repair and re-shipping heavy equipment from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

In addition, the army survey disclosed that a lot of European equipment will be obsolete for Pacific fighting; would have to be rebuilt, taking valuable time. Instead, the new plan calls for bringing the men back at once, issuing them new equipment specifically designed for Far Eastern combat. Later, the army will bring back overseas war gear and use it for Pacific replacements.

This should speed final blows against Japan, and shorten the Far Eastern war by many months.

As a result, 1945 production schedules will probably be a billion dollars higher than those of 1944. The war department, which had a pile of telegrams two feet high canceling war contracts to be sent out the day Germany is licked, has now culled through them and may only cancel a few dozen orders.

MACARTHUR AND MARINES

The boys in the Pacific long have known about the rivalry between General MacArthur and the U. S. navy. Many are the wisecracks about MacArthur and the U. S. marines, land army of the navy. However, in only one case so far as is known, has MacArthur ever come up against one of these jokes face to face.

It happened on one of the Philippine islands a few days after it was taken and when MacArthur was inspecting a battery of marine artillery. Solemnly, he passed from gun to gun, making no comment.

Then suddenly as he came to one gun, he turned on the marine lieutenant in command and let loose the most terrific dressing-down that young officer ever had received. The air was smoky with expletives. The lieutenant at first stood bewildered. The gun was carefully polished. Everything was in place. Then he looked a little closer. Beside the gun an enlisted man had placed a sign. It read:

"With the help of God and a few marines, MacArthur retakes the Philippines."

The lieutenant thought at first that he would be busted. But several days passed and nothing happened. He is now back in the United States and the story can be told.

INSURANCE LOBBY

The insurance lobby is headed for trouble regarding its bill to exempt insurance companies from the Sherman anti-trust act. If the lobbyists aren't careful they will get a White House veto.

The bill passed the senate in a form which met with all-round approval. But in the house, the insurance lobby sharpened its ax and quietly tacked on some amendments which will not be acceptable either to the White House or, probably, to a majority of the senate. Chief effect of the amendments was to make it impossible to revive the anti-trust act regarding insurance companies, without a special act of congress.

Fair-minded Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, who was quite willing to give the insurance companies a reasonable compromise, will fight this extra grab to the end. So will a great many of his colleagues.

CAPITAL CHAFF

General Franco's controlled Spanish press has been using the same propaganda line as Hitler regarding the recent Big Three conference.

Despite the fact that American diplomatic relations with Lithuania hang by a thread, the Lithuanian delegation celebrated Lithuanian Independence Day even after the Big Three conference.

The war department's G-2 or military intelligence is being reorganized again, partly as a result of failures to spot Nazi troop concentrations preparing for the bulge attack.

The Mexico City confab is the most sorrowful Pan-American conference in history for Dr. Leo S. Rowe, benign, longtime director of the Pan American union. This is the first important Pan-Am parley held outside the confines of his union. Dr. Rowe says: "I cannot speak, but my heart is running over."

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 19:16-26, 29.

GOLDEN TEXT—If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.—Matthew 16:24.

What you have is not your own. In fact, if you are a Christian, both you and your possessions belong to God (see I Cor. 6:20; 7:23). To be His disciple involves the recognition of the fact that life is essentially a stewardship, holding our property and our persons in trust for Him.

The cost of discipleship is one which should be candidly faced. It is far more than the cost of joining a church or subscribing to a creed. That may and often does mean little or nothing, but to be a follower of Christ calls for thinking and living in accordance with His standards. We must—

I. Think Right About God (vv. 16, 17).

The picture of this rich, intelligent young man, a leader in his community, coming to Christ with his eager quest for eternal life is a most attractive one. He recognized Jesus as a master in Israel and a good man.

His thinking about our Lord did not go far enough, and Jesus corrected him at once. He pointed out that if he recognized Him as good, then He must be God. Far from disclaiming divinity, Jesus declared here that everyone who thinks right about Him must agree that He is God.

It is of the highest importance that the follower of Christ be clear that his master is God. Otherwise, his attitude toward Him will reflect his defective viewpoint, and his witness concerning Him will lead men astray instead of aright. Correct doctrine is vitally important as the foundation of real discipleship.

The one who thinks right about God will—

II. Live Right With Others (vv. 18-20).

The commandments to which Jesus referred were those which concerned a man's relationship to his fellow man. There is to be no violence to another person, no deceit or trickery, no dishonoring of confidence, but an active interest and love for one's neighbor as well as one's family.

The disciple of Christ cannot effectively serve Him in this world without a proper attitude toward others. He must not sin against them, that is clear; but what is more, he must be known as one who loves them.

Note that this young man could honestly say that he had kept these commandments. Few of us could make such a claim, but he did. And Jesus did not question it or rebuke him. In fact, He loved him for it (see Mark 10:21).

What a fine character this young man had, what limitless possibilities for usefulness, what promise for the future! But something was lacking, something stood in his way. Jesus went directly to the heart of his trouble and told him that he must—

III. Act Right About Money (vv. 21-26).

Toward persons, his life was rightly related, but toward his possessions—ah, that was another matter. He was rich and his money stood between him and God, between him and a life of service and spirituality.

When a man has money and uses it for God's glory and the good of his fellow man, it is a blessing to him and to others. But when money lays hold of a man, and it has him instead of his having it, spiritual disaster is ahead, and not far away.

It is proper to be prudent, thrifty, and ambitious, but when the gathering of wealth becomes the uppermost thing, even these worthy qualities become the enemies of a man's soul.

Note the astonishment of the disciples (v. 25). They, too, though they had little or nothing, had been smitten with the awe for riches.

Do not miss the glorious assurance of verse 26. Nothing is impossible with God. He can even save a rich man, and does it!

Now there is more to discipleship than sacrifice. God has a recompense for His children. Let us

IV. Expect the Right Reward (v. 29).

No one has ever lost anything by serving the Lord. He gives liberally and makes a hundredfold return for every sacrifice we make. Christian workers can testify that God has literally fulfilled this promise to them.

But the greatest reward of all waits beyond the end of this earthly life. Over yonder there awaits us the prospect of eternal fellowship with the Lord we love and serve, and with all those who share with us the place of being disciples, followers, and servants of Christ.

This life brings many precious moments of joy and satisfaction. There is friendship and comradeship in labor. There are a thousand blessings even here, but the greatest of all is the prospect of being forever with the Lord.

Richard Crooks Believed In a Division of Labor

Once during an opera, Richard Crooks had for his leading lady a prima donna who was more than pleasingly plump. In one scene he had to carry the lady across the threshold of a cottage.

Exerting herculean effort, he managed to lift the heroine, but his knees almost buckled when he started to walk. Gritting his teeth he staggered across the stage, and with a sigh of relief deposited her inside the cottage.

"Oh, Mr. Crooks," she gushed, "did I cause you much trouble?"

"Not at all, madam," he lied, the veins standing out on his neck. "But tomorrow night let's make it in two trips."

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy and his wife settled on a farm in Missouri, where Homer was born. Sunday meant church, company for dinner, and steer weighing. The Croys attended the Omaha Exposition, where Homer had his first taste of the outside. He finished high school and college, then went to New York City to work. After his mother's death, Homer returned to New York, had his first novel, "Boone Shop," published. He received word that his father was falling and rushed home. His father told him the farm was clear, a fine one and wanted him to always keep it. Soon after Homer returned to New York Mr. Croy died. Homer was unable to attend the funeral.

CHAPTER XXI

It broke my heart to go back to the farm. A succession of renters had about stripped it; the cave where we had hidden from the cyclones was falling in; the fences were down, the hog pens my father had taken so much pride in were ankle deep with filth; the corn rows were green with cockleburrs. In a way, I was glad my father could not see it.

I was tempted to sell it. But I could not quite do that, for the feel for a farm is deep and abiding; especially if it is wrapped with tender youthful memories. No, I could not sell it. Nothing could make me do that.

A black shadow appeared. A member of my family got into trouble and wanted to put a mortgage on the farm of $8,500. I thought of what my father had said as I had sat on the camel-backed trunk, but the situation was so serious that the mortgage had to go on. It was as if a hand had squeezed my heart.

I came back to 10 Standish Road, depressed. I looked at The Little House with the Big Mortgage and my heart went down again. As so often happens, this was the time my stock was up, when everybody thought I was prosperous. My name was in the papers, I had sold the first talking picture for Will Rogers at what everybody assumed to be a whacking price; and I let them think so, uncomfortable as I sometimes felt.

Meantime there was that $210 a month; and some months I was not making that. How often they came around! The Irving Trust Company had the mortgage on both the lot and the house. I can still see those printed forms that came snowstorming in with the blank spaces filled in with ink. If by a certain day, the money had not been paid, an impersonal voice would call up and say that we had undoubtedly overlooked it.

I was trying to write humor. In all the writing business there is nothing so hard to sell. You'd think every magazine would want humor; and every magazine says it does. But they don't buy it. Chiefly because no two persons ever agree as to what is humorous and what is pretty terrible. In a magazine office, among the manuscript readers, there is always a divided opinion; so, usually, the editor plays safe by taking something everybody agrees on.

Finally the lane turned, but not before it was almost at the precipice. I got a new tenant for the farm, Mr. and Mrs. Spide Logan. Thank God it was just in time! I had known Spide when I was a boy, but not very well. His first name was a nickname, but it had become so universal that it took an old-timer to know that he had another. He had long legs, in his growing days, and the boys had started to call him "Spider," finally it had shortened to Spide and Spide it still is. Never had I realized what a blessed difference a good tenant could make. We drew up a contract which said, in effect, we were partners and we would go share-and-share alike—fifty-fifty—with certain provisions. I was to furnish the land and the fences and the seed; he was to furnish the "power," which meant horses, then, and the help to operate the farm. The contract got down to a finer point than that; for instance, I was to pay half the fuel oil, if we ever made enough money to buy a tractor. Then a little twist in the contract: I was to get one-third of the eggs. I did take it for a while—and thankfully, too—but finally told Nellie Logan the egg money was hers.

The barn, which Pa had built after the cyclone had whisked the first away, was now a noble ruin. When you went in it, you ran a chance of having it come down on you. One tenant had fancied a door, so the door had departed with him. We had to build a new barn. How we were going to build it, I didn't know. But that barn meant something to me emotionally. I had played in the old barn, I had slept in it during the haying season when an exciting hired man told exciting stories. One night a storm had come up. I wasn't quite brave enough to stay. But the hired man did. You had to respect a man like that.

It is truly astonishing what you can do when you have to. But it also makes a person feel that half the time he is a pretty weak vessel. The barn was to cost a thousand dollars. The sum was staggering. I went to Joseph Jackson, president of the bank, and told him my troubles and he drew up some papers and after a while there was a thousand dollars in the farm account. I suppose ours was the first barn in the world that didn't cost more than the amount originally planned. When, finally, the barn was up, we didn't have enough money to paint it. But, Nellie Logan turned the hens loose on the job. By that I mean she had to take her egg money and turn it into paint. But at last, Nellie and the hens and I painted the barn!

I built that barn by mail and in my imagination. They told me the day the first load of lumber would be hauled and I was on that load of lumber; they told me the day the slushers would arrive and I saw them taken out to the barn lot. They told me when the head carpenter would arrive, and I saw him put on his apron and drop his hammer in the loop on his leg. As the barn progressed, they sent me snapshots of it, and I watched it grow. I was like a father a thousand miles from the hospital. But at last it was born—my white-and-blue-trim child. Some way or other I raised the money to go out and see it, and Spide was down to meet me, as Pa used to be, and we climbed into his car. We came in from the east side of the farm and, when we topped the hill, there was the barn shimmering in the sunlight. At least, it seemed shimmering. Of course it was a bit different from what I had expected— isn't a child always?—but there it was, a fine white, stanch, center-drive, hip-roofed barn with two lightning-rod points. And on the front of it there was painted: The Homer Croy Farm, J. Theodore Logan, Manager. I think you would like that barn; I think anybody would.

Owen Davis was turning my story into a film play for Will Rogers. I remembered what my friend had said about Hollywood needing somebody with the homey touch. In spite of the almost desperate situation, Hollywood was managing to get along without me, for the telephone didn't ring, except from the bank and a few scattered bill collectors. The bank wanted to know, since I had sold a motion picture for Will Rogers, why I didn't pay up. I told them I had got only a crumb or two from Mr. Fox's table; they said they knew how to handle people like me.

The picture was released and made an outstanding success. I went down to my club, The Players, and let them look at me. I was congratulated right and left. Lots of drinks . . . money that should have been going to Mr. Boerner, the grocer. But that is human nature. It was sweet, indeed, to nibble the fruit of success—the first I had had since West of the Water Tower. But there was no fruit in the bank.

I hated the farm. It was taking everything and giving nothing. And yet there was still a lingering love for it, as one might have for a person who has broken his heart.

For the first time in its existence our town saw people lining up before our banks demanding their money. Two of the banks closed and people went on relief. A word my father had never heard. The Salvation Army played on the streets where it had never played before. Knots of farmers, in patched clothes, stood on corners. Food was doled out in the basement of the church where Billy Sunday had shaken his fist at the devil.

When I went down to the depot to get on the train, I felt exactly as I did when I had left Pa in bed that last time. I felt the farm would slip away, too.

I told myself I did not care. I was weaned away from it; it was doing nothing but demanding money. I was a city man. A man could not be tied all his life to a piece of land just because he chanced to be born on it. Sell it for whatever I could get, pay the insurance company and, if there was anything left, at least I'd be that much ahead.

But even while I was telling myself this, I knew I could not go through with it. Any more than one can desert a member of the family who has become a burden.

There is, indeed, truth in the old adage that the blackest hour is just before dawn. I have seen it work out too many times to doubt it.

This special dawn began very simply by a telephone call from the McCann-Erickson advertising agency, in New York. Would I come in and see them?

Would I! I would have crawled. But you don't tell an advertising agency that. You pretend you are a very busy and successful writer and say you think you can manage it and work out a date convenient to all. It is quite an art.

The best hope I had was that they might want me to submit something for a radio program. But also I knew that advertising agencies expect the poor author to take all the risk. Well, I would growl a little about doing it on speculation, but I'd do it. Maybe something would come through . . . that is the hope an author lives on. And the only way, so far as I know, to make a success of writing is to keep putting in an oar here and there. After a while you may get your boat moving.

I found a most impressive gentleman who, after some cigarette talk, wanted to know if I had been to Hollywood lately.

I told him I hadn't. While I kept wondering to myself what this strange conversation meant. Certainly he had nothing to do with pictures. Scenario writers were not hired on Madison Avenue.

"I've received a telegram from Chicago about you," he said and picked up a yellow sheet and slowly read it through to himself. Hours it seemed to me it took.

Who in Chicago would wire to him about me? I kept asking myself. But also I knew the ways of advertising companies were inscrutable.

He laid the telegram down. "Have you any scenarios you have written?"

"Scenarios?" I said, for things are not done that way.

"Yes."

"I might have a copy of one. I don't know. I'd have to look through my things."

"Will you do that? I wish you'd bring it in and write down a list of everything you've done for the movies." He picked up the telegram and again silently read to himself. Then put it down. "Can you do that today?"

I said it so happened I could.

Then we shook hands and I went out.

I looked through my things and found a scenario and two or three "treatments" and some odds and ends, and raced back.

He picked up one of the manuscripts. "Is that what a scenario looks like? I never saw one before." Then looked through it in his slow methodical way.

I thought, "If he doesn't know anything about scenarios, why did he send for me?" But maybe this was the way advertising agencies work.

"I'll let you hear from me as soon as I can," he said finally.

I went out again, unable to make head or tail of the mysterious affair. Maybe I should have asked what it was all about. Or should I? I simply didn't know.

Three or four days passed, then came a telephone call. Could I come in to see him?

I said I could manage it.

"I've just talked to Chicago," he said, "and they want me to ask you some more questions." He glanced at some notes on his desk and cleared his throat. "Have you ever written a training film?"

I hadn't the slightest idea what a training film was. But I wasn't going to show it. "No, I haven't," I said as if I hadn't got around to the chore.

He cleared his throat again and said "Hmmm!" and my heart dropped to my belt.

"Do you think you could?" he asked.

I said I thought I could.

He considered this for some moments, looking among his papers and wrinkling his brows. Finally he said, "I guess you are wondering what this is all about?"

"Well, yes," I said as if the idea had flashed into my mind.

"I haven't been permitted to divulge my client, but I think I can do so now." I leaned forward to show I was interested. "It is for the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. They want to make a film which will help their dealers."

I wasn't quite sure what a "dealer" was, but I wasn't going to show that, either. "I think I can do that," I said modestly.

"If everything is agreeable in Chicago, could you go to work at once?"

I said I thought I could.

My heart, now back in place, was flopping under my shirt front.

"How much would you expect in the way of remuneration?"

My heart gave a violent thump. I knew that anybody who said "remuneration" had money.

Although the term "high seas" is understood to refer only to the open, unenclosed parts of seas and oceans, it has been held, by the U. S. Supreme court (150 U. Dear Friends:

Having just received the wonderful box of candy, (my favorite make) I really was happy and overjoyed to receive it now, as on Christmas Day. Tokens of Faith such as that given one so far away from their loved ones quite a lift in spirit and hope. Thanking you most heartily and praying for as early return to those we love. All whom have been torn apart by this conflict. May God Bless you all.

Sincerely,

Pvt. J. T. Ludden (medic)

Dear Folks:

Just wanted to write and let you know I received the box of candy your club sent me, and I want to say thanks a million. Too bad Christmas comes but once a year. I also received the birthday box, am sorry I didn't acknowledge my thanks sooner. You people there on the home front are really on the beam and keep up the good work. There isn't very much I can say about myself except that I am OK and well.

I could use a little more mail. So if you want to help keep our morale up just drop us a few lines every now and then. Guess I'll sign off now thanks again for the packages. It sure was swell candy and swell things don't last very long. Guess that's all for now and until later, I'll close and say, so long.

The following letter was sent by Pvt. Ray C. Murray of Lincoln Estates to his mother:

France
Jan. 8, 1945

My Dearest Mother:

This is just another of your son's "short notes" to let you know that I'm now working on Chapter 7, the last chapter, by the way of my novel "Dawn of a New Day". It's not a horror story. Just a story based on my own personal opinions and feelings toward the majority of the Italian people. Please don't feel toward Italy as a lot of foolish people do—terming it an exact duplicate of Nazi Germany—for Italy was (in my opinion) duped into the secure feeling that as long as she stuck with Fascism which in turn would stick with the Nazis that everything would be taken care of. She was duped into a false feeling of security much as in the Roman days: Voice for the people? There just wasn't any. Fascism's Voice? Heard much too often. When you stop to think, that if your country's policy, its likes or dislikes were thrust before you 24 hours a day thru radio, newspaper and party organs, they in turn would automatically become your likes or dislikes especially if news of the outer world were censored by and at the hands of your country's headquarters (before or if) it ever reached you. And thru penalty of death you were "cautioned" forcefully if necessary, against listening to any and all foreign broadcasts.

But now on Germany the majority of people in America are inclined to become too lenient, pause to consider, the German people put Hitler in, supported him wholeheartedly, backed up his entry into any country, and if you care to look at the records still support him or Nazism in any form, as in reference to Aachen and its stubborn resistance. That the German soldiers rank along side the Japanese soldiers in his acts of cruelty, a better word is brutality, and that he is inhuman need no confirmation in my eyes. I've seen results of his work.

In Italy from the people themselves who would gain nothing by trying to prevaricate. Well, Mom, I'm off key tonight I guess. How are you? I'm okay.

Your loving son,
Ray

In perfect working order - BUT

... NOT ready for action

without means of linking it to any other telephone anywhere

Your telephone has a whole set of working parts assigned to its exclusive use and essential to such use, parts that may be located miles distant from the instrument itself.

To put one telephone in service, we must provide circuits all the way from the instrument to a switchboard, a switchboard outlet, circuit making and breaking devices, and a lot of other complicated equipment, without which a telephone cannot do its job.

Telephone facilities have been stretched to the limit by the needs of war. Even when more instruments are again available, we will not be able to fill all applications for service immediately, due to other shortages all along the line.

We appreciate the patience of those on the telephone waiting list—and will do our utmost to serve them all at the earliest possible moment.

With Army Troops Somewhere in the Philippines—Pfc. Gordon R. Benson, Mokena, was a member of one of the first patrols sent out by his veteran division in its third campaign. They contacted and killed two Japanese.

While scouting out an area, the patrol saw Japs running out of huts several hundred yards away. The Americans moved up to investigate.

One of the infantrymen was only a few feet from a shack when he saw a Jap walk past a window. He fired, and his fellow soldiers joined him. But this was the only enemy in the hut. In the meantime at the other flank of the patrol, a scout was sent across a river to reconnoiter several shacks. As he ascended the opposite bank, he caught sight of a Jap. Losing no time, he fired immediately and killed him.

The patrol brought an enemy saber home with it, in addition to a pistol and Japanese documents.

Dear Folks:

Just a few lines tonight to let you know that I received your package that was sent to me. And also to tell you that I was very happy to receive it. And I want to thank each and every one of you for it.

I have been here almost a month now and it sure doesn't seem that long. The time has really been passing fast. As you probably know, I am going to radio school. I am happy to say that I like it very much and it is also very interesting.

The weather here has been quite cold already, but it seems sort of nice to get back in a cold climate again.

Well guess this is about all for tonight. Hoping this letter finds you all feeling fine and thanks again for the package.

Sincerely yours,
Walter Bormet

Dec. 17, 1944

Dear Ladies:

I received your most welcome Christmas gift and card today. Everything that was in the box came in very handy, as all those articles are very scarce over here in Belgium. Keep up your good work Ladies, as the Women's Service Club is proud with me and I know that every Mokena serviceman feels the same toward it. I have three buddies with me. We will all share the box on Christmas Day.

I am getting my share of boxes and gifts from my friends and relatives. It means very much to a person when you are so many miles from your family to be remembered by your friends in Mokena.

Before I close I want to wish all my friends a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Thanks again for the gift. I hope to see you all real soon.

I remain as always,
Pfc. Philip C. Hacker

Dec. 17, 1944

Dear Ladies:

This won't be much of a letter but I want to thank you for the swell Christmas box. Yes, I opened it, it's too hard to wait for Christmas to come. I wasn't the only one to open it. I had plenty of help. As long as I've been in the Navy, I don't believe I've ever heard of any fellows talk about a Service Club like Mokena. Anyway it's swell, and you really see that we get them for Christmas. Thanks again, Sincerely,
Fremont Warning, R.M. 3-c

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

Primary Room

With measles and spring colds catching some of our little people, we are wondering just how many will be able to take their parts in our program.

Yes, today, March 9, at 2:30 o'clock we are giving our program. We hope that each mother and many of our fathers will be able to attend, also, any other persons interested in the first and second grades.

Room 3 and 4

The Junior Red Cross of the school will provide the men in the armed forces with Easter posters filled nut cups, tray covers and napkins.

This room is happy to welcome a new pupil to their room, Mary Lou Huddleston, who entered the 4th grade. She came from the the Alcott school in Chicago.

Grades 5th and 6th

The old saying, "spring is just around the corner", seems to be true during the physical education period of these two classes. Jumping rope is being taught from the most simple stage to the more difficult stages, as jumping with two ropes at once. Each pupil has his own rope and is really having some fun.

A new pupil has entered grade 5 making our total enrollment 30. We are happy to welcome Martha Huddleston into our room and hope she grows to like Mokena school.

Attractive posters of flowers made with crepe paper and the decorations appropriate for March help to make the room a cheery place in which to do our work.

We are, indeed, proud to have been the winners of the $1.00 award of the PTA. Plans were made to buy and furnish an aquarium with the money, but because of the war, no aquariums are being sold. If any reader has a second hand one for sale, we would be happy to hear from you.

Grades 7th and 8th.

The 7th and 8th grades have just finished booklets in science on the "Birds of Illinois;" one in reading on "Snowbound" and are starting one in the Health Program containing the important things about Nutrition, Specific Disease Control Sanitation and Community Health Service.

Coyotes In Cook County

About five years ago, one winter night, a Forest Preserver Ranger who lives in the Palos headquarters heard the yapping howl of some animal that made his hair stand on end. A few days later, a farmer in the Sag valley saw what appeared to be a wolf lope across a road. Finally the ranger, concealed within sight of a faint path apparently used by wild dogs or foxes, shot a coyote. The little bunch of black bristles at the base of its tail, covering a scent gland beneath the skin identified it as being of the wolf family. The animal was sent to the Illinois Natural History Survey, at Urbana, where it was pronounced to be a prairie wolf (also known as the "brush" wolf). In the west it is generally known by its Spanish name coyote.

That same winter the rangers shot four other animals that were obviously part coyote and part dog. Coyotes, which were common here in the early days, may eat a few pheasants and quail, and some rabbits, but their main diet consists of small rodents such as field mice and gophers. Wild dogs however, and the crossbreed of dogs and coyotes, are clever, cruel, silent killers. They, and the common house-cat that has gone wild, are a terrible menace to all wild life. Some heartless people dump unwanted dogs and cats out into the forest preserves. If these do not starve—and most of them do—they become savage hunters and killers. Therefore the rangers have orders to shoot them on sight.

The Palos area offers ideal den locations and hunting range for coyotes. In that hilly section of Cook County, 23 miles southwest of the Loop, the Forest Preserve District owns more than 9,000 acres from Archer Ave. (Route 4-A) south to 143rd St. and from old Kean Ave. west to Sag village. This area of it lies the Sag valley in which was built Calumet-Sag canal to connect Calumet Harbor in Lake Michigan with the main Sanitary Drainage and Ship Canal in the Des Plaines River valley. Apparently the coyotes, and many other animals, have their dens in the high ridges of rock on both banks of these canals—rock excavated from the Niagara limestone that lies close beneath the ground surface.

The coyote has learned to outsmart man and to stay out of his sight and gun-range. Rarely seen or heard-of for many years, they have gradually spread back thru Wisconsin into northern Illinois. They are the most wary and cunning of all our wild animals, keen of sight and smell, and amazingly swift. They are so wise that only the most experienced trappers, wearing boots treated to conceal the man-scent, after tracking them for days to learn their habits, sometimes succeed in trapping coyotes. Big steel traps are used, handled with special gloves carefully concealed beneath grass or leaves around a sapling which is sprayed with scent from another coyote.

This fall one of the Forest Preserver men, grading a hiking and bridle trail with a big power-driven grader, glanced up to see a coyote standing not over 300 feet away. This one was apparently curious and perplexed by the big machine with its purring motor. The scent of the man was overcome by the exhaust of the engine. But when the operator stopped the grader and got off, that coyote went away from there like an arrow. He had seen plenty!

Plant Leaves Tell When To Remove Mulch

The leaves of the strawberry plant and not the calendar will tell you when to uncover and rake the mulch away from the plants, points out A. S. Colby, professor of pomology, University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

When the time comes to remove the mulch, the strawberry plant leaves will begin to turn yellow under the mulch. If left longer, some of the plants will be killed. Lift the straw a little so that the leaves can grow up through the mulch, but leave most of the mulch on the ground to keep the ground cool and hold some of that soil moisture for the berries.

Backing Our Fighters With Food. Beef, dairy, swine, and poultry projects are favorites with thousands of 4-H'ers like Donald Stoxen of Hampshire, who was chosen as one of America's leading young dairymen at the National 4-H Congress.

Head as Well as Hands work for Glenn Thomas, State Rural Electrification Champ from Prophetstown. Ingenuity and "know how" enabled club members to construct hundreds of time, work, and animal-saving devices, enabled them to build many pieces of hard-to-get farm equipment.

Food Conservation, meal planning and preparation earned Norma Jean Gahn, Streator, a scholarship at the 4-H Congress. Cooking, canning, sewing and other domestic projects provide fun and education for future homemakers like Norma Jean.

LAST YEAR, inspired by their slogan "Back Our Fighters in '44—Produce, Conserve, and Do Lots More," more than thirty-four thousand Victory-minded boys and girls in Illinois rolled up their sleeves, went to work and did a man-sized job of helping to win the war.

Extra effort was placed on the production of food needed to fill mess kits and market baskets. And having produced the food, they went all-out for its conservation through projects involving meal planning and preparation, canning and preserving the surplus. Other club members made contributions by learning to repair and remodel old clothing, as well as design and sew new garments. Projects in all phases of farming and homemaking were completed.

Many special wartime services were conducted by these patriotic young folk...tons of waste paper, scrap metal and fats were saved...four ambulances were donated to the services...equipment for a radio shop in an army general hospital is being purchased.

Social Activities and business-like meetings, complete with officers, speakers, and demonstrations, stimulate and hold interest in 4-H clubwork, give members recreation and a sense of responsibility. Here's the Yorkville 4-H Club in session.

For these, and countless other contributions, we owe our Illinois 4-H'ers a debt of gratitude.

Another 4-H Club Week is here. Parents are urged to encourage their children to join the local club. The advantages of being a club member are numerous. Social activities provide entertainment, teach community leadership. Contests create a competitive spirit resulting in a broader, more thorough education. Physical well-being is stressed. When Head, Heart, Hands, and Health team up, you have an unbeatable combination—the 4-H Clubs. Boys and girls today—leaders tomorrow.

More than 10,000,000 boys and girls from everywhere have taken part in 4-H activities—a glowing tribute to our 4-H clubs' worth. The active Manhattan Snip-Snap Club hold their meetings at regular intervals.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YEARS

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disappeared the second day. Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Hensel's Drug Store, Mokena.

The following descriptive letter was received by Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht from her cousin S. Sgt. Norman Baumgartner of Homewood and formerly of Frankfort.

Sitting on a cot and waiting for one of the innumerable inspections that are held here in the hospital. Doesn't make much difference to the patients tho, except for keeping out of the path of a hurrying broom and being careful where the cigarette end falls. Want to thank you for the most original Christmas card. It came at a time when we were extremely busy pushing Germans back to Germany and had no time for anything save fighting. In fact, I was in a fox hole when it was brought to me. That particular week was really a tough one for us, the one in which fell about 2 feet of snow. We attacked thru waist deep drifts and dug in for the night with only the snow for blankets. I never was so cold or miserable in all my life. However, I was lucky, cause I was able to pick up a piece of stray shrapnel and spent the greater part of the winter here in a comfortable hospital.

Despite the discomfort brought on by blizzards, one could not but be impressed by the beauty of the Belgian winter. The place is very much like a resort when untouched by the make up of winter, full of wooded hills separated by rocky streams and dotted by picturesque little villages. With the coming of the heavy snows, the pines became white towers showing only patches of green where the snow had blown off. Perhaps my imagination worked overtime but I was certainly impressed. Even the wonders of Paris and the chateaus of Versailles could evoke in me a comparable sensation. I hate the thought of going back to the drab country that is western Germany but this war must be fought by someone. Baumgartner was wounded January 20 and is recovering in a hospital in Paris.

Pfc. Delbert Seeman returned to Ft. Sill Sunday after spending a two week furlough with his parents. The following dinners were given in his honor. Somewhere in France.
Dec. 24, 1944

Dear Friends:

I received your letter the other day and was glad to hear from you. I hope this letter finds you all in the best of health. I am OK.

I received the Xmas package which you sent me and I would like to thank each and everyone of you who help with it. I always receive the Tinley paper and boy is it nice to read it, it makes a fellow feel like he is closer to home.

The weather is pretty nice here but it is pretty cold out, but that's not so bad because I like the cold weather. Until next time.

Your friend,

Dear Friends:

Thank you so much for the lovely things you sent me for Christmas. Probably you have not heard that the WASPS were inactivated as of Dec. 20 so I am no longer in the service. I want you to know how much I appreciated all the lovely things you have given me during the past year and I know those still in service will continue to enjoy your thoughtfulness thru out this year. Only those who are away from home can know the wonderful feeling it gives one to know that somewhere in a little town a group of people are doing things to make the days brighter.

I'd like to wish you all a Happy New Year and pray that before next Christmas your daughters and sons will be home to stay.

Thank you again.

Dear Friends:

I want to thank you for remembering me at the Christmas season with that swell gift. I sure appreciate it and we all enjoyed it. I'm sorry for not answering sooner but during the busy days of the season and also in the process of shipping was sort of kept on the go. Am now down south again but just for a few days until assigned and then will move again. From what I'm told its quite cold around home. Down here it is just like the month of May. The nights are cool but the days are warm, sure seems strange for the month of January. Well folks its getting late, but thanks again.

Dear Citizens:

Thank you again.

Jan. 1, 1945

Dear Folks:

You sure presented your colors the past year. Its been grand to be on your list and I want to thank all those who granted the swell gifts and for keeping me in touch with my home town.

Many of you I've never met but someday we will meet, it can't be helped especially in a town the size of Tinley Park. We had a wonderful Christmas. The best I've spent in the service. Not because of being stationed in China but by the prompt delivery of our swell gifts from home and the delicious meals shipped from the States.

The day of Christmas Eve we all received many packages and the wrappings and strings were tossed about just like we did when kids. Each little gift was displayed in grand style. Tell the Joliet Brewing Co. that one of their bottles arrived in China. I'll bet that is the longest distance that liquid ever traveled.

Turkey and the trimmings was put before us on table cloths no less. From types of pie and a dish of the unheard of ice cream I sure made up for lost time and just about out did myself eating everything in sight.

With the passing of old '44 I can say I had a little more hope from that year than it produced. We did go a long way. I think we are in the last inning now with the score way in our favor. Keep up the cheering in the stand and we can't lose.

Bye for now I wish you all the best of everything.

IF THERE was a matter of a million dollars at stake and you, as manager, had to pick the greatest one-game pitcher for a particular contest—what hurler would you select? Years ago I asked Connie Mack this question and he had a ready answer. His pick was Charles Albert Bender, the Chippewa Chief, the wiry Indian who was not only a great pitcher but always at his best when the blue chips were on the line.

"We've had some pretty fair pitchers on the Athletics in our time," Connie said. "I mean Rube Waddell, Lefty Grove, Eddie Plank, Herb Pennock, George Earnshaw, and many others. Some of these undoubtedly had more stuff than Chief Bender had. But Bender was always at his peak in a game you had to win. On that one day you knew he would be at his best—and the million dollars would only key him up—not let him down.

"I know there have been better pitchers over a season or through many years. But in a pinch where the pressure was heavy, where the stake was high, Bender was a hard man to beat. And he would be just as cool and as relaxed for a million as he would be for a dime."

After this talk, I put the same problem up to Frank Frisch, one of the smartest men baseball has ever produced, one of its greatest competitors.

Picks Dizzy Dean

"Bender was a little before my day," Frank said. "Under the conditions you have named I think my pick would be Dizzy Dean. Dizzy was not only a great pitcher, but he also loved the spotlight. Also the pressure. His biggest thrill was in meeting Carl Hubbell. But competing against any star pitcher delighted Dean. And don't forget that Dizzy had everything a great pitcher needs—blazing speed—a fine curve ball—change of pace—good control—and above all unbeatable confidence in Dizzy Dean.

"With a million dollars at stake Dizzy would have been unbeatable, at least as close to unbeatable under such conditions as anyone I ever saw. For he would have revelled at such a chance. Even a billion dollars would never have bothered Ole Diz. That's what I mean by naming such a pitcher."

Remember this is not a matter of naming the game's greatest pitcher through a season or through many years. It is the matter of naming the pitcher you would select under the heaviest sort of pressure for one vitally important game.

Christy Mathewson, in his prime, belongs in this class. Few people today remember the Matty who pitched three successive shutouts against the Athletics in the 1905 World Series.

The million dollars would never have bothered Matty. He lost the Giant-Cub play off in 1908—probably the most important single game ever played—but how many know he tackled this game with an arm so sore and tired that he could barely lift it when he began warming up. For that season Matty had won 37 games, and saved 12 others.

I'll give you another tough million dollar competitor—in or out of condition. His name is Grover Cleveland Alexander. Here was as great a combination of heart, head and arm as I have ever seen. As a rookie in 1911 he won 28 games.

Alex was another who took new inspiration from a tough spot, even in his fading years when he was in no shape to handle the job. But he still handled it, as Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees remembers in the 1926 World series when Alex fanned him with the bases full.

And there is Ed Walsh of the White Sox—the pitcher Ty Cobb names as the greatest of all time for a period of five years. Walsh was a 40 game winner—and at his best in a hot spot. So here we have named such blue chip stars as Bender, Dean, Mathewson, Alexander and Walsh. And there is always Carl Hubbell. These "big dough" entries were sure to be at their best for one big game—one vital contest.

I have another nomination who belongs in this listing: Walter Johnson, winner of 400 games with a weak-hitting Washington club.

Odd Ring Styles

We were talking with Dumb Dan Morgan, who has only been mixed up with the ring game for a trifle more than 50 years, about various ring styles. Dumb Dan brought up Lee Oma, possibly the best heavyweight on the home front.

"Oma is an odd one to the present generation," Morgan said, "with his way of dropping both hands, walking by an opponent as if taking a stroll, looking over one shoulder as he goes by, and then suddenly turning and leading the attack.

Ladino Clover Aids Farm Production

Returns Far Exceed Costs of Handling

NOT so many years ago, Ladino clover was almost unknown except in the irrigated valleys of the western states. Believed to have come originally from Lodi, Italy, the seed was first imported into the United States about 1900.

Ladino clover is particularly valuable for grazing, according to U. S. agronomists, due to its high carrying capacity and large protein-mineral nutritive content, but it is also adaptable for hay and silage and is an excellent cover crop. These characteristics make it especially suitable for the limited farming areas of states such as Vermont and New Hampshire, enabling farmers to grow most of the protein needed for their livestock, dairy and poultry.

The plant is a rapid-growing perennial legume, spreading by creeping fleshy stems that root at the nodes. The leaves, stems and flower heads will grow from two to four times as large as those of common white clover, and about six times as large as those of the English wild white clover. The average life of a good Ladino clover and grass planting is from four to seven years, management and fertilization.

Ladino clover proves excellent pasture for dairy herd.

tation practices determining the length of time it retains its value. Despite heavy requirements for fertilizer and special care in management, results from the use of Ladino adequately repay the effort. Its particular value has been found to lie in the handling of dairy cattle and poultry where a high-yielding, nutritious, high-protein feed is needed. This versatile crop is being used increasingly for hay and silage, particularly when grown with other legumes and grasses, although it is primarily for grazing.

Sunflowers New Cash Crop for Farmers

Sunflowers may soon rival corn and soybeans in food value as well as a cash crop. With sunflower oil selling at 14.5 cents a pound and an acre producing a ton of seed, the farmers around Monticello, Ill., expect to produce more than corn or soybeans.

Sunflowers have long been recognized as an excellent source of protein and oil. America imported 120 million pounds of sunflower oil between 1932 and 1936, mostly for edible purposes.

One hundred acres of test planting yielded 1,600 pounds of seed. It was harvested by a clipper combine, self-propelled, formerly used for soybeans. Tests made at the University of Illinois showed that the seeds contained 53 per cent protein and were easily digested. The oil was excellent for salads and cooking.

Pays to Fight Weeds

To control weeds the following points should be remembered: don't let weeds go to seed, buy only weed-free seeds and feeds, clean home-grown seeds carefully, grind or screen weed-free grain, and don't let machinery spread weeds.

Run-down weedy pastures should be renovated and good rotation and cultural practices resorted to with intensive cultivation. It is possible to eradicate perennials with sodium chlorate.

Navy Takes Over

By GERTRUDE TEWALT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

CLINGING grimly to a transport rail that dipped and bucked like a loco broncho, Corporal Ted Boone was ready to dispute with Magellan who called this heaving body of water the Pacific. Since Magellan wasn't around, an innocent sailor who happened along caught the brunt of his bitterness.

The bluejacket eyed him with the age-old contempt of the salt-water sailor for the landlubber. "Maybe you'd like to get off and walk," he suggested nastily.

"Show me some solid ground and watch my dust," replied Ted with longing.

"Comes H-hour and you get your chance," promised the gob. "The Jappos had better bust out their white flags when you get ashore. That is, after your knees stop buckling and the ground settles down."

"I am not seasick," Corporal Boone denied hotly.

"No?" grinned the sailor. "Then how'd you like to dig into a dish of cabbage and fat bacon with a side order of hot cakes and syrup?"

After a stricken period, Corporal Boone raised his head. "Go away," he moaned feebly.

"Don't give in to it," advised the sailor. "Walk around, get in an argument—anything. What's your name, soldier?"

"Boone, Ted. What's yours?"

"Tyler. They call me Tarzan from my muscles, see?" He flexed his biceps.

Tarzan was not disposed to take offense. "I'd like to know what you got against the Navy. Where'd you be without the Navy, I ask you?"

"Back in Frisco, well and happy," groaned Ted.

"Yeah? Well, you can't win the war staying in Frisco. Us Navy sees it that you G.I.s get where you can do some good. Dames like navy-blue better'n khaki, too. Want to see something?" He fished inside his jacket and brought forth a handful of snapshots, crumpled and dog-eared from much handling.

"Why? Would you sooner be fighting than taking a nice cruise?"

Corporal Boone looked with lack-luster eyes. "So what? Must be a clothes shortage where those babes come from."

Tarzan thumped his barrel chest. "Now, those gals used to go around with civilians, soldiers even, until I hove into their lives. Now they're all Navy Jills. They gimme these pictures 'cause any girl is proud to be a Navy man's pin-up, see?"

"Here's one who isn't," said Ted sharply. He fumbled in his blouse and produced a picture tenderly wrapped in tissue. Carefully, he unfolded it and showed it to the sailor.

"Whew!" Tarzan's whistle was an honest tribute to the girl whose likeness smiled up at him. "She's got class." The face was oval and sweetly serious with large, loving eyes, framed by thick fair braids that encircled the proud little head like a coronet.

"That's my wife, Betsy," said Ted with pride.

"I see what you mean," Tarzan said slowly. "You're a mighty lucky guy, Boone."

"We got married just before I was shipped overseas," continued Ted. "We never had a real honeymoon, so when I get back we're going to blow my allotment on the swellest honeymoon two people ever had."

"Where will you go?" asked Tarzan.

"Who cares? Just so it's cool and quiet. Just Betsy and me and a gang of bellboys on call with tall, iced drinks. Imagine having your shoes shined and your clothes pressed, tickets for the best shows, no sergeants, no reveille, nothing to do but relax and enjoy yourself."

"Sounds like heaven," agreed Tarzan fervently. "Just remember it's the Navy that takes you home."

The transport pitched sickeningly. "Not if I'm conscious," Ted gasped. "Maybe I'll fly or swim, but they'll have to hogtie and drag me on board another ship. And when I once land, I never want to see the ocean again."

Behind them a sergeant approached on deck. "Is that you, Boone? Got a letter for you?"

Ted eagerly tore it open. As his eyes devoured the words, his face grew even greener and his knees sagged.

"It's Betsy," said Ted hollowly. "She has her heart set on a honeymoon cruise through the West Indies after the war."

Notes of a Newspaper Man:

This, they tell you, happened at the Big 3 conference. . . . One evening after dinner Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin started speculating on what nationality they'd prefer to be if they couldn't be their own. . . . Churchill said: "If I couldn't be British I'd want to be American." . . . Roosevelt said: "If I wasn't American, I'd be British." . . . Stalin said: "If I wasn't Russian I'd be ashamed of myself!"

During the recent run of the Theater Guild's "Embezzled Heaven," the star, Ethel Barrymore, was rushed to the hospital with pneumonia. She was placed in an oxygen tent. . . . President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill were among the many who sent posies and telegrams, and for a few weeks everyone despaired of her pulling through. . . . Finally, the worst was over and the star was permitted to sit up in bed and answer the phone. . . . The first caller was the Guild's Theresa Helburn.

"Hello," she cheerily said, "how's your cold?"

The other night a Hungarian playwright was told an actor had arrived from Hungary. . . . "Do you know him?" he was asked.

"Know him?" was the retort.

"He's my best friend. I hate him!"

Our recent paragraphs about misplaced commas brought the one about the London Daily Mail, which has a reputation for making fewest errors. . . . All sorts of editorial supervision was employed—bonuses were offered the staff to maintain the highest standards, etc. But the Mail was still less than perfect.

Finally, the editor summoned the staff and announced: "Hereafter, the first copy will be printed on special stock and sent to the King of England."

Editorial blunders dropped 90 per cent.

A Texan in London was trying to impress some Britishers with the size of his home state. "Do you know," he said, "that in Texas you can hop on a railroad car at 8 in the morning and still be in Texas after riding 24 hours?"

"We," replied a Britisher, "have trains like that in England, too."

It happened at the premiere of "One Man Show." . . . The curtain was up and a woman was making a big to-do as she got into her seat, huffing and puffing. . . . Seated near her was George Luddy, the Indian-born author. . . . He polished her off neatly by audibly remarking: "Don't worry about her. She's so used to the second balcony—that sitting in the orchestra tonight has given her the shakes."

The exciting stories from Manila included the one about an American radio reporter who was freed after three years as a Jap prisoner. He was forced off the air one day as the Japs entered the city. The other morning, said the papers, he resumed broadcasting this way: "As I was saying when I was so rudely interrupted—"

De Valera of Eire was arrested while speaking at a street meeting several years ago. When he was freed years later, his first statement was: "As I was saying when I was so rudely interrupted—"

Margalo Gillmore, the actress, was anxious to become a nurse's aide but found she didn't have enough stamina for the work—being frightened by the sight of blood, etc. So she compromised by becoming a Grey Lady (one who reads to the convalescent servicemen, etc.) . . . Margalo was telling Carolyn Burke about her duties. . . . "Just what is a Grey Lady?" asked Carolyn. . . . "A Grey Lady in my case," said Margalo, "is a yellow nurse's aide."

There was the time the late Alex Woolcott was the victim of a type-setter's error. . . . The critic once referred to a famous recitalist as "a popular disease."

It came out: "Popular disease."

When critic Rascoe covered the new play, "Hope for the Best," he was no little flattered that the principal comedy line (used intermittently throughout the three acts) was something he wrote many years ago. It was "Something no wife can ever understand, no matter if she lives with the man for 25 years, is that a writer is working when he is staring out of the window."

A group of newspapermen were gabbing about the current college stories—the basketball scandal and the race discrimination report on dental colleges. One of the scribes said: "No matter what kind of a college yarn I write, I never have to worry about my punch-line." . . . "Howcum?" asked a chronic-ho-cumer.

"I just write," said the first newspaper man, "Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, could not be reached for comment."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Inadequate traction is one of the causes of automobile smash-ups in winter traveling. Inadequate traction can be due to smooth tires that should be recapped.

Rubber had a strong influence in the spending of 17 1/2 billion dollars on street and highway construction and maintenance in the U. S. in the ten years ended 1942.

The materials used in the making of cord fabrics for synthetic motor vehicle tires are the same as used in pre-war natural rubber tires--cotton and rayon.

MARLEY PLAYS GREAT SUCCESS

Last Saturday evening two one act plays were presented in the Marley Church.

The first play "Never Trust a Man" was given by the Patriotic Workers of Marley and those who took part were as follows: Shirley Jones, Dolores Cleveland, Lois Bell, Marilyn Floyd, Betty Haass and Mrs. Saunders. Mrs. Loren Sass announced the program.

The play was very well acted and the large audience present, learned what a man was, seconded very closely by woman.

The second play "Humming Bird Hiccough" was given by the Sunday Evening Club of Marley and the following took part in the play: Mrs. Saunders, Dolores Cleveland, Marilyn Floyd, Lois Bell, Daniel Sass, Harry Rogers, James Tilsey and Homer Sabin.

Each one in the play did their part exceptionally well. James Tilsey had a severe trouble with his back and Homer Sabin was ill with a rare mental disease, but a wonderful magic word from their doctor, Daniel Sass, dispelled all trouble until a troublesome lady, Mrs. Saunders appeared and spoke another magic word.

Charles Sass of Marley entertained by singing several songs before the plays. Mr. Bob Burch of Homer played the guitar and sang cowboy songs during the first and second plays.
